CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

In a world facing increasingly complex forms of conflict, the environmental consequences of such struggles are both extensive and pressing. From resource-driven tensions to socio-political upheavals, conflicts of various kinds pose severe and often overlooked threats to ecosystems and natural resources.

This year's conference seeks to explore this timely and urgent issue, shedding light on the vulnerabilities of our environment and those who protect it amidst diverse conflicts, while highlighting the critical need for its preservation. The X TIEC aims to foster intellectual exchange and multidisciplinary dialogue on this topic.

The colloquium will explore the above-mentioned topic through the following three critical panels:

- Ecocide, the Climate Crisis and Conflicts
- Environmental and Human Rights Defenders and the Criminalization of Environmental Activism
- Local Conflicts and Environmental Governance: Good Practices and Regional Solutions
